
In a Galaxy Far, Far AwRy
Issue 6: Power Tool

Liam Gibbs

THE STORY SO FAR...

Issue 1: Serial Fiction Sideshow, available in the hearts of one and all.

Issue 2: Home Sweet Home Invasion, available in the hearts of one and all.

Issue 3: Technophobia, available in the h—you're starting to see a pattern here, aren't you?

Issue 4: Armageddon Trigger Finger, available in...hey... your heart. And one and all's too.

Issue 5: The Genetic Equation, available blah blah blah.

Please visit www.inagalaxyfarfarawRy.com for more information on where to grab a copy of one of these fine works of art.

OTHER PATHOLOGICAL LIES

Not So Superpowered, available at <http://tiny.cc/nssuperpowered>

Three Flash Fictions, available upon request from the author

Nasty threats shouted at top volume across alleyways at midnight

CHAPTER ONE

BUYER BEWARE

December 21, 9109. 8:14 a.m. (Galactic Standard Time).

“OKAY, I’M CALLING THIS WREAKING OF CHAOS TO ORDER. Wait, Lieutenant, is this thing on? And is my All-Tweener Girl Tracks album playing? Good. OKAY, NOW I’M CALLING THIS WREAKING OF CHAOS TO ORDER.”

Crock, that sounded loud! Luzimoss Grenard’s Trioxidillian pinnas still vibrated under his skin-covered ears. Was that Master Asinine? Luzimoss stumbled off the sidewalk into the wall of a bank and accidentally crushed the bag of oranges cradled in his arm. A shame. They’d looked juicy. They were juicy, he guessed by the sticky remains drenched across his shirt.

“CITIZENS OF WHATEVER THIS PLACE IS, BOW BEFORE MY ALMIGHTY MASTERY OF YOUR ATTENTION FOR TEN OR TWENTY MINUTES, WHICHEVER COMES FIRST.”

The blithering bellowed through a megaphone so clearly and loudly in the Arkanal Marketplace that it sounded as if the heavens had exploded with the voice of a raving idiot. Must have been the Bad Guys. “ALSO, MY NEW POWER TIE IS SHINY.” Yes, the Bad Guys.

The screams of market patrons raked the air, and a snarling stampede against pavement followed. Luzimoss stepped aside to avoid the bystanders that shoved against each other in a melee to escape. One stampeding woman would soon slip and Luzimoss had to be ready. There she went. She slammed against the cobblestone sidewalk. Luzimoss helped her up before the stampede crushed her, and she continued to panic away. Luzimoss funneled his words over the stampede. “Hurry before he start making up letters!”

“I AM YOUR DEATH MACHINE, MARKET SUCKERS. BUT DO NOT FEEL CONFUSED MERELY BECAUSE I AM A MAN. I AM HERE SIMPLY TO EXECUTE AN ACTION PLAN TO END YOUR MEAGER LIVES AND GAIN INCREASED MARKET SHARE. FILE ME UNDER THE LETTER DEATH MACHINE. Are they bowing yet, Lieutenant?”

“They’re actually fleeing, sir.”

“I hate natural responses to panic.”

“Using intimidating business jargon causes that. And you sow the seeds of panic like a gladiatorial gardener. By the way, ‘death machine’ is not a letter.”

“Then it must be a number. So file me. I go under ‘death machine.’”

“Holy crock.” Multipurpose caressed a sai with his index finger. Luzimoss could picture it without looking. “If you keep flapping your spew hole, I’ll file your crocking tenders under ‘things Multipurpose crocking ninjas up.’”

Luzimoss ground his teeth in a hiss. Curse those ridiculous voices. One belonged to Master Asinine, the leader of the vilest criminals known to livingkind. And now he and his Bad Guys terrorized this marketplace. Luzimoss’s blood thickened enough to deepen the color of his blue skin. His body heat rose despite the wind in this side street.

He should have anticipated this situation. He anticipated everything...given a margin of error. He'd been caught off guard because his mind had wandered. A 63 percent chance that was the case, according to the multiple voices in his head. When his mind wandered, he neglected the voices, his "knowledge feed."

Luzimoss didn't need to look to know what was happening—he knew—but he looked anyway. Asinine's garish ill fashion would take his mind off the juice covering his shirt. And possibly Asinine's paddleball thwacking.

Luzimoss's knowledge feed supplied the situation's details, and he imagined the scene in his mind's eye. Master Asinine stood behind the robot-suited Mechanism and announced buildings he wanted the armored cohort to destroy. And stand behind Mechanism he must: the mouthpiece of his loudspeaker snaked out of the armored goon's helmet. Hadn't he heard about wireless technology yet?

Asinine's fashion nonsense today topped that of any previous outfit, which told Luzimoss that the idiot desperately needed a wife, a tailor, or a gaping head wound. He dressed as if he were on his way to a business meeting for jesters. His self-made Proclaim Your Love for Cultural Icons T-shirt Day was today, and so his outfit included a white Junkyard Dog shirt. He wore purple suit pants with green suspenders over that and... Oh, for the love of Alaphus. White complemented most things, yes, but not a tie with carnation pink dots. Or that mime makeup.

Okay, back to reality. Asinine would soon return to his public outcry. And was that a fanfare trumpeting from the speakers in Mechanism's bodysuit? At Asinine's behest, of course. One more polka fan Luzimoss could do without meeting.

"LISTEN UP, PEOPLE OF THIS STREET. Lieutenant, what's this street? We don't know? Okay, we'll name it. LISTEN UP, PEOPLE OF AVENUE INSANE-O-MATICULA. MY ASSOCIATES AND I ARE SEARCHING FOR AN OBJECT OF MUCH INTEREST. WE HAVE TRACKED ITS ENERGY OUTPUT TO THIS MARKET. YOU MAY NOT KNOW WHERE IT IS, BUT IF YOU REFUSE TO TELL US WHERE, I WILL INVITE YOUR MOTHER-IN-LAW TO YOUR HOUSE THIS WEEKEND. SO THERE."

Mechanism grumbled. "That is appealing to their sense of reason."

"And their sense of common."

The Bad Guys advanced, scaring innocents out from underneath produce tables and transports. More screams littered the commotion, and the screamers clambered for escape. The oozing Plaster grabbed a melon table. He upended it and sent those underneath scurrying away. The brainless thug needed to do something for entertainment.

Master Asinine's sycophantic second-in-command, Lieutenant IQ 23, stood beside Asinine. He accidentally smacked his leader's face with the question marks attached to his helmet's temples. The ugliest goons to ever disgrace a news datasheet, Plaster and the fatter-than-fat ninja, Multipurpose, stood behind Mechanism and Asinine's bodyguard, Braindead. Multipurpose nursed an ache, a result of too much walking.

Asinine jibber-jabbered, "Mechanism, to show how serious this latest free-for-all is, enact the destruction of that parking garage over there with rockets o' plenty. Enact it in a free-for-all fashion, too. I don't do free-for-nones."

Luzimoss stepped forward. He needed to stop this before Asinine killed someone, an 82 percent likelihood if no one intervened.

Asinine checked a storefront. "Ooh. Mechanism, forgo the garage. Point and click a missile at that ice cream parlor. And blow me up a double scoop of rocky road. Who's ready to find the crock out of some stuff? Me, that's who."

In his full-body armor, Mechanism put his robot-gloved hands to his hips. "I doubt this 'coolness source of powerful proportions' hides behind a drum of tutti-frutti. However, this will prevent us from clinging to any remaining shred of dignity. And destroying this store will perhaps deflect a cone into my forehead and kill me before the ridicule can."

"Don't be so hard on yourself. I'm sure you'll last until the ridicule phase."

Mechanism unleashed a tiny missile at Asinine's desired target. The explosion snarled through the Arkanal Market and chewed apart the ice cream parlor. Luzimoss didn't mind. He'd never before seen it, but his knowledge feed told him that parlor charged way too much for a single scoop.

A lagging market patron limped between two buildings to escape the parlor's bursting debris. Before shrapnel could decapitate him, Luzimoss grabbed him and yanked him behind a billboard for Meat Paste Hotdogs.

"Neutronium Bonding Glue could have prevented this parlor's destruction," a public address speaker on the parlor's wall said. The parlor leaned forward with bricks crumbling off. It teetered...teetered...collapsed. A billboard advertisement on its side, one promoting Intergalactic Protection's new narcotics squad, dropped, slicing the air above Luzimoss. The building's upper floors loomed down. Luzimoss didn't bother moving since the ad had only a 2 percent chance of halving him. It cut the asphalt inches away, where the parlor crunched against the building next door. The area quaked with thunder billowing from the debris. Dust trickled into Luzimoss's nostrils.

Master Asinine spread his hands. "Fan out, everyone. Since these worthless fools would rather panic than help me achieve my misguided goal, you'll have to actually lift a finger. Multipurpose, that means you, too, no matter how out of shape that finger is."

"Shut the crock up!" Multipurpose stamped forward. Then the inevitable wince.

Master Asinine pointed his pistol at another building across the street. "The coolness source must be inside that shop. It's sinister. Mechanism, reengineer the front entrance so it looks blown up."

Mechanism slouched, his armor clanking. He looked displeased. He always looked displeased. Asinine's needless business lingo displeased him most this time. “Must you act this insipidly whenever we leave our headquarters? And whenever we are at our headquarters? This sinister shop is a joke store. You purchase our ammunition there.”

“Not all of it. The exploding cigars come through the mail.” Master Asinine aimed his pistol and popped two shots into the shop’s latent-technology window. The l-tech window fragmented into static nothingness. He popped another shot through the gap left by the l-window and hit nothing. He turned and fired at a furniture store, pecking apart a bunk bed and a dresser. “Okay, whoever finds me the source of unimaginable coolness may receive a plunderin’ raise for outstanding data-work projections. That coolness source is around here somewhere. I smell it. Smells like a wet dog.”

The last market patron scrambled around an advertisement hologram and out of the battleground, so Luzimoss approached Master Asinine. He knew this “source of unimaginable coolness.” His knowledge feed rated his chances of being correct at 97 percent.

Luzimoss stepped forward. “You there, with the fashion nonsense and the guy in the toy robot suit.”

Mechanism looked taken aback. “Toy robot suit? I’ll have you know—”

Luzimoss whipped up a hand: Mechanism, shut up.

The onrush of thrusters blew through the pulverized market square. Two yellow lights emerged behind a thick cloud that swelled from several chimneys. The cloud split to reveal a Fireball starship. Ugh. Not them. So intently had Luzimoss concentrated on the Bad Guys, he'd not noticed his knowledge feed's warning. His blood heated. He'd had this handled! He slammed a fist against a transport. The civilian transport bleeped in annoyance. The Good Guys had arrived. Or—huh? On their starship's wing...was that the Bad Guy logo? What idiot was responsible for that? Oh. His knowledge feed said Power Plant was. Now the logo made sense.

A British voice blared through a public address speaker. Harrier's. "GEORGE LOWENSLAND, THIS IS HARRIER OF THE GOOD GUYS. FOR TRANSGRESSIONS AGAINST THE PLANETARY UNION OF RENOVODOMUS, WE HAVE COME TO PLACE YOU UNDER ARREST. PLEASE TURN YOURSELF AND YOUR FOLLOWERS IN."

"Turn myself in? How—" Master Asinine stopped and yanked at the mike dangling from Mechanism's head. Mechanism's head came with it. "TURN MYSELF IN? HOW MANY TIMES MUST I TELL YOU I HAVEN'T DONE ANYTHING WRONG?"

A shuffle whispered out of the Good Guys' megaphone. A perky voice trilled through the marketplace. "NINE MORE TIME. MEBBE MORE. MEBBE SIX."

"Jeffrey, I can bloody well manage the authoritative yelling. Thank you. Continue your cutting and pasting," Harrier said. Then, into the microphone, "DONE NOTHING WRONG? ASININE, YOU ARE POSITIVELY BARMY. EXAMINE THIS STREET. YOU'VE DEMOLISHED THIS ENTIRE BLOCK, YOU'VE MURDERED THREE INNOCENTS, AND—Yes, Jeffrey, it is a nice turtle drawing. You may put it on your fridge doojigger. No, we need not hear the happy hobby art siren.”

“A hostile takeover. I hate corporate raiders.” Asinine snapped his fingers. “Everyone, prepare for round one of atomic horseplay. Multipurpose, prepare for coat one of applied muscle ointment.”

Lieutenant IQ 23 scurried to Asinine, Braindead close behind. Plaster and Multipurpose laughed. Then only Plaster laughed. Multipurpose nursed an ache in his rolling gut.

Harrier’s voice turned away from the speaker. “Franchise, land the craft. Franchise? Franchise, stop shaking. You need not engage in combat. Just...” He growled. “Blimey. Fine. Everyone, fly out.”

Luzimoss watched from his position behind a building. Several Good Guys shot from the starship: Harrier, Power Plant, Burnout, and Kamikaze. Their fliers. Kamikaze’s landing proved too steep. He smacked into the ground, rolled across the street, hopped up, checked himself, looked disappointed, dropped down, and kept rolling into a fruit stand. Power Plant and Harrier faced the Bad Guys. Power Plant stuck out his tongue.

Harrier slid a hand over Power Plant’s shoulder. “Delay your tongue lashing until after the punches, Jeffrey. It may come in handy later.”

Master Asinine threw Mechanism’s head mike at Harrier. It rebounded off its wire into Mechanism’s mouth plate. “Are you trying to stop me from gaining more market percentage by seizing the coolness source of powerful human goiter from us?”

“Humungaloidness, sir,” Lieutenant IQ 23 said.

“My toy collection won’t be complete without this coolness. It is the key to controlling the universe.” He snapped his fingers in recollection. “Lieutenant, remind me to pick up buttermilk pancake mix before we leave.”

“Your favorite buttermilk-and-pancake foodstuff, sir.”

“Uniting the two was pure brilliance.”

To find a way out of this situation, Luzimoss scanned the breadth of his knowledge feed. Harrier clutched his head as if bracing against an abrupt migraine. And Luzimoss knew it was a migraine. Master Asinine, Plaster, Power Plant, everyone stopped and buckled to their knees. They all deserved this agony, but it soon stopped. Luzimoss finished scanning, having given them only a mild dose.

Still stunned, Harrier dropped to his knees, favoring a braced kneecap he’d injured during an attack last Friday. “We are here to arrest you for yesterday’s hostage taking, Asinine, though I am unsure if mistaking cardboard cutouts for living people constitutes a crime.” His feathery wings shivered.

“The intent was present, though the thought, as always, stayed home,” Mechanism said. If he were holding a teacup, his pinky would have been poised.

“And I’s goin’ to ninja fantasy camp, so’s give in now a’fore I ninjas up you.” Power Plant stamped forward with the foot not wrapped in bandages and healing putty.

“Enough wit’ the openin’ remarks.” Plaster thrust forward and squared a stony punch into Harrier's jaw. Harrier retaliated by slicing Plaster's cheek with the talons of his fingers. The two slapped hands together, and their palms wrestled for dominance above their heads. Plaster slammed Harrier's ribs with a mammoth boot to separate them.

Power Plant ducked Lieutenant IQ 23's wild punch. Behind him, Braindead knelt on all fours. Lieutenant IQ 23 leaped forward and shoved Power Plant over Braindead. Studying from the grade-school playbook again?

Kamikaze darted around Mechanism, grabbed a trash ionizer, and battered it against the metal-clad figure. Mechanism held out an arm and watched Kamikaze slam into it. Just as Luzimoss had expected. Probably just as Kamikaze had expected, too.

Time to end this, Luzimoss decided, before anything but random shops and, with any luck, some Good Guy and Bad Guy skulls were destroyed. He marched into the center of battle, both arms outstretched, battle-fire zipping around him. His knowledge feed warned him to dodge before he caught a light-bullet in the shoulder.

In seconds, he was on Harrier. Approaching from the left gave him a 78 percent chance of moving unnoticed. He reached Harrier and twisted the kneecap Plaster had cracked two days ago. The wingman blacked out. Kamikaze fell next: Luzimoss dodged a punch that tickled the air beside him and stabbed a finger into a pressure point that made Kamikaze's eyes bulge. Luzimoss soon bested the other Good Guys, then followed up with the Bad Guys. Mechanism proved difficult to defeat, but a hidden chink in his oil-scented armor helped. All thanks to Luzimoss's knowledge feed.

The combatants squirmed, so Luzimoss lowered his arms. Humph. He stomped to Master Asinine, whose eyes clamped shut in tearful agony. "Looking for a powerful source? You followed my brainwaves. That source is me." He slammed a boot into Asinine's ribs and thundered off, leaving these warmongers to kill each other. Alas, they wouldn't, since the Bad Guys would recover first and escape.

"Quick! The key to our market strategy is escaping!" Master Asinine writhed with a hoarse cough. "The coolness source of great humu—Lieutenant, what was that word again?"

To be continued...

Not totally revolted by that preview? Then you're in luck!
The rest of this travesty of the arts will soon be available.

Keep your eye—the good one—on <http://www.inagalaxyfarfarawRy.com> to find out if Master Asinine finally learns that word or if he gives up on the English language entirely.

For updates and the latest sports scores, visit me at my social-media haunts.

Keep tabs on the series at www.inagalaxyfarfarawRy.com

Like it on tiny.cc/iagffa facebook

Follow it on tiny.cc/iagffa twitter

Utter snide comments at it on tiny.cc/iagffa googleplus

Make barnyard noises with it on tiny.cc/iagffa linkedin

Or have nothing to do with it. That is, if you feed off the quiet sounds of my soul weeping in self-pity.

